Reshuffling of Command Believed to Pave Way For Such Move

WAVELL GOES TO INDIA

Repeated Demands Made That MacArthur Be Given Larger Sphere

By Joseph A. Bors
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 3 — (INS) — Diplomatic circles were rippling with speculation today that reshuffling of the Far Eastern high command paves the way for the appointment of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as commander-in-chief of the United Nations forces in the Pacific southwest.

Washington observers believe that the retirement of Sir Archibald Wavell to the India command presages MacArthur's removal from the Philippines to lead the Allied armies against the Japanese drive to conquer Java, Australia and New Zealand.

A joint Allied announcement said that Wavell had returned to the India field operations, and that he had been tentatively succeeded by Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, head of the Dutch army. MacArthur's brilliant tactics in the Philippines have thrilled the world, and repeated demands have been made that he be removed from Bataan and given a larger sphere of action in the Far East battle area.

Diplomatic sources believe that the return of Wavell to India is simply the first step in a reorganization of the high command that will eventually see the inspiring American general as the commander-in-chief.

American Destroyer Sunk Off Cape May

Washington—The Navy Department announced today that the Jacob Jones, a 1200-ton American destroyer, has been torpedoed and sunk off Cape May, N. J., by an enemy submarine.

The sinking occurred last Saturday, announcement being made today in the Navy's 50th communique.

The text follows:

"Atlantic Area—The USS Jacob Jones, a World War destroyer, was sunk by an enemy submarine off Cape May just before dawn on Feb. 28.

"There were only 11 survivors consisting of nine engine room ratings and two apprentice seamen. Factural information is spare in regard to circumstances that led to the sinking because of the lack of deck ratings among the survivors.

"It has been established, however, that prior to receiving the first torpedo hit, the enemy submarine was not sighted nor was the torpedo.

"The first torpedo blew up the bow and apparently killed all the personnel on the bridge as well as the men sleeping in the forward living compartments.

"The second torpedo which was fired after the U-boat circled ahead of the Jacob Jones blew up the stern and all the depth charges."

"Tax For Victory" Program Before Congress

Washington—Gravely warning that "to defeat the strongest combination of enemies in our history we must spend on a scale unprecedented," Treasury Secretary Morgenthau today laid before Congress an all-time record "tax for victory" program which hits hardest at the middle income earner, and swells Federal revenues by $7,610,000,000.

In brief the plan contemplates:

Doubling lower and middle bracket personal income levies with lesser percentage increases in the already heavily taxed upper incomes, to raise an additional $3,200,000,000.

Authorizing a "collection at the source" system under which 10 per cent could be deducted from wages or other income as a credit toward these taxes.

Imposing new excise or "hidden" levies on soft drinks, candy and chewing gum and generally increasing most excise taxes, especially on gasoline, beer, distilled spirits and cigarettes, all to net $1,340,000,000.

Sharply increasing excess profits and estate and gift taxes and levying on corporation incomes a special war surtax of 31 per cent. This will yield $3,360,000,000, but will diminish other Federal revenues by $1,000,000,000.

Plugging $680,000,000 worth of "loopholes" by which, Morgenthau said, "some taxpayers are escaping their just burden."

Japanese Invaders of Java Are Stopped In Their Tracks

Bandung, Java—Brilliant offensive action by Dutch troops, ably aided by American and British fighting men, has stopped the Japanese invaders of Java in their tracks, an official NEI communique said today.

The enemy resumed aerial activity, however, with a 90-minute raid by 42 big bombers and 18 fighter planes on the Bandung airport. Little material damage was done.

New successes were reported for Dutch and American bombers and fighters which continued incessant offensive action against the enemy. Direct hits were scored on two Japanese transport ships of 10,000 and 8,000 tons respectively off the Java coast. Three seaplanes about to take off were blasted to bits.

Japanese Attempt to Extend Domination

Washington—In an apparent attempt to extend their domination of the Philippine Archipelago, Japanese naval units today were reported shelling at least seven points on three islands in the Central and Southern zone.

"The enemy is landing troops in Zamboanga, on the island of Mindanao, from a convoy of four transports, escorted by a cruiser," the communique said. "The city is in flames.

"Japanese naval units, including a cruiser and destroyers, are shelling several ports on different islands of the Philippines."

Britain's Food Position Causes Anxiety

London—A strong warning that Britain's food position is causing anxiety and that the nation must tighten its belt was issued by an authoritative British spokesman today.

"We are passing through a special period of anxiety regarding food supplies and distribution," the spokesman said. "The substantial decline in food imports is due chiefly to the complexity of the shipping situation."

FILE THREE SUITS IN COUNTY COURT

One Involves A Settlement By An Undertaker Of Morrisville

ONE IS FOR DAMAGES

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 3 — Three suits, one of which involved a settlement by an undertaker, have been filed in the Court of Common Pleas here.

Following the filing of an action in trespass in which J. Allen Hooper, administrator of the estate of William Smith, who named Charles H. Ingersoll, New Jersey, the defendant, and who was claiming $187 as a damage claim, Judge Calvin S. Boyer has authorized a compromise and settlement.

The plaintiff, who alleges that William Smith, of Falls township, was struck by the defendant's car October 31, 1941, and died in a Trenton hospital a few hours later, avers that the funeral, burial lot and funeral service cost $187, for which amount he sued the defendant.

The funeral director plaintiff alleges that the decedent alighted from a bus just before being hit by the Ingersoll car.

Claiming the sum of $10,000 damages, Peter Sobel, who was struck by a car on the Bethlehem Pike, near his home at Line Lexington, has named Nellie Seyfarth, 173 Diamond street, Sellersville, the defendant in an action in trespass.

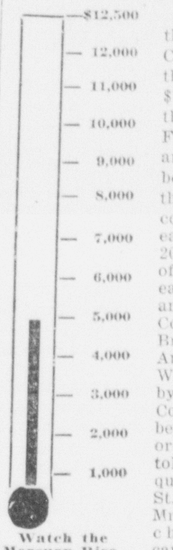

The plaintiff alleges that he was walking along the highway, Route 309, December 25, 1940, when he was struck by a car driven by Mrs. Seyfarth but owned by Henry C. Belford.

George E. Hunnewell, 2257 North Second street, Philadelphia, has named Charles Eliassen, Riegelsville, the defendant in a damage suit claiming $5,000 for personal injuries and $384.70 for property damages.

The plaintiff and defendant were operating cars on Route 611, near Riegelsville, December 11, 1941, when they figured in a crash.

In a counter-claim filed by the defendant, the Philadelphia motorist is sued for the sum of $92.26, which Eliassen alleges it cost him to repair his car.

FLEETWINGS GIVES $5,000 TO RED CROSS

Substantial Contribution Will Not Affect the Quota Set For Bristol Area

QUOTA HALF REACHED

Another Bristol industry has made a substantial contribution to the Red Cross War Fund which is being raised for the benefit of the United States armed forces and for civilian relief.

This latest donation comes from Fleetwings, Inc., and is for $5,000.

In a letter accompanying the check, Frank deGanahl, president of the firm, writes:

"We herewith hand you our check for $5,000. We send you this check in the knowledge that it will be used for the benefit of our armed forces, only by an organization that is outstanding in the effective use to which it puts its funds."

This contribution, like other corporation contributions, does not aid in attaining the $12,500 quota set for the Bristol area. The quota of $12,500 must be attained by contributions not exceeding $500.

Bristol has only reached about half of its quota and there remains about one week in which to obtain the balance. Solicitors are busy going about their districts, but if the quota is to be reached, a number of substantial donations will have to be received.

DISEASE CONTROL PLAN

EDDINGTON, Mar. 3—Speaking recently at a meting of vegetable growers of Bucks and Philadelphia counties held at St. Francis Industrial School here, extension pathologist and etomologist declared that fruit and vegetable growers should be on the alert for spray letters from the office of the County Agent. The audience was told of the difficulty of getting spray materials and the use of substitutes.

Dr. R. S. Kirby, extension pathologist, and J. O. Pepper, extension etomologist, on Thursday and Friday spoke to two groups of fruit and vegetable growers in the county.

On Thursday evening they spoke in the auditorium of the St. Francis Industrial School, here, where they were the guests of vegetable growers of Bucks and Philadelphia counties.

Friday they spoke to about 40 people, members and teachers of the biology classes of the Doylestown High School, National Farm School students and fruit and vegetable growers.

The specialists discussed a program for peaches, and an apple spray schedule. They suggested the same insect and disease control program to be used this year as was carried on last year.

A material it will be difficult to obtain will be skimmed milk and substitutes include soy bean meal or soy bean oil.

"The United States Government has asked for the conservation of copper in the form of Bordeaux mixture," said one of the speakers.

"Watch for the spray letters which come from the office of County Agent William F. Greenawalt and those published in the newspapers and when the various sprays are to be used or materials substituted and you will get along fine," one of the speakers said.

Rescues Boy, 6, From Drowning In Canal

A six-year-old boy, Phillip Cliver, Otter and Swain streets, was pulled from the canal near the Grand Theatre, yesterday afternoon. The lad, except for a thorough drenching, appeared not to be affected by his cold bath.

Cliver, with an older brother, Lewis, 8, and Earl Leedom, 5, of Otter street, were playing about the water course when Phillip threw a can into the stream. The lad then lost his footing and fell into the water.

R. McGlynn, Bath street, saw the plight of the youngster and jumped into the water and brought the boy ashore.

Cliver was taken to his home in an automobile.

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERNAN
(I. N. S. Staff Writer)

The starry-eyed set is rattling the cup for the release of Earl Browder on the ground that he was gaoled for his political beliefs.

Browder used three different names in obtaining passports and was caught the third time around.

That is no reason to reverse the mechanism of the merry-go-round.

His two aliases still are at liberty.

We sat through Browder's trial and never heard Communism mentioned except by the defendant. He spoke well of it.

The jury listened politely and then convicted him.

He had forgotten to explain his aliases.

His apologists sound like the lawyer defending the man charged with beating his wife.

The lawyer said "My client is married but unfortunately his wife is ill."

Thought for the day: How do you like your herring?

ADVICE TO PARENTS

Probably a majority of parents of young children in this country will admit that at least three-fourths of their dread of war is the result of worrying over its effect on young minds.

Social workers and medical authorities have studied the problem of children in war time, checking on conditions and results in England and in other areas where children have been exposed to some of the worst horrors of modern warfare.

Students of the problem are now offering helpful advice to American parents. Experience in England has shown that children who remained with their parents, even in bombed areas, were not psychologically "scarred" by the experience if their elders controlled themselves. That is, the children can take it if their parents can.

But authorities warn against the sudden removal of young children from home environment unless they had some preparatory training outside the home. In many cases evacuation has caused mental suffering although the physical safety of the children was assured. In possible evacuation areas young children should be sent to nursery schools taught to depend on teachers as well as parents, given some degree of self-confidence.

Never, says the United States Children's Bureau, banish all talk of war from family conversations. There should not be attempts to fool children by telling them that a blackout is a "sort of fire drill." It should be explained to youngsters that being afraid is not being cowardly. It is natural for children to be frightened in certain situations. They should be permitted to express their fears, but they should be kept busy.

EXPANDING THE NAVY

It was fortunate that the United States made as much progress as it did in increasing the nation's naval forces in the last twelve months. During 1941 a total of 31 warships was added to the fleet and 50 more were launched and neared commissioning.

According to the current issue of Sea Power, the magazine of the Navy League, the 31 warships put into service included two battleships, one aircraft carrier, a cruiser, 16 destroyers and 11 submarines. The vessels launched included three additional battleships, six cruisers, 24 destroyers and 17 submarines. The tabulation, of course, did not include naval auxiliary vessels.

There is no point now in deploring the fact that the nation did not appropriate more money for naval building in 1941. There has been an attempt to correct that oversight with tremendous allotments of funds. But even the most ambitious naval program does not look too big today in the light of current events and future potentialities.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, in his testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee at the hearings on the bill for lend-lease aid to the Allied Nations, estimated that the axis will have 500 submarines by January of next year. With that number of enemy undersea raiders roaming the seas, possession of a huge number of destroyers by United States forces is imperative.

Nor is the nation's merchant ship construction program too large when viewed in the light of that submarine fleet.

MATA HARI'S Daughter

By MAURICE DEKOBRA and LEVLA GEORGIE

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

The spy's pointed weapon jerked upward, as if pulled by strings. A bullet slugged its way harmlessly into the ceiling. The bulky enemy agent collapsed grotesquely, his legs folding under him before he pitched forward and lay still.

Dick's big, angular frame appeared out of the lightening dawn. "Hello, there," he called cheerily. He bent over the dead man for an instant. "Too bad. I'd rather have taken him alive. Couldn't chance it, though, under the circumstances. A mean customer!"

Brinda scarcely knew what Dick Malden said, she was so happy to see him alive.

"Dick!" she cried. "Oh, Dick!" Then, somehow, she was in his arms.

The Squire coughed. "Someone coming," he warned.

It was the constable. He approached cautiously.

"Oh!" he said, on viewing the doorway, "you got another!"

"Where's your prisoner?" asked Dick sharply.

"I was 'oping you'd seen 'im," said the constable. "'E got away."

* * * *

With his good hand, Sir John angrily crumpled the report he had just finished reading. Against Dr. MacDonald's advice, he had returned to London on hearing of Brinda's adventure. A loose sling supported his injured arm, and his face was white with fatigue. But he sat bolt upright at the desk in his study, spurning even the support of the chair-arm.

He addressed his orderly Hunt, hovering nearby. "Tell my niece I wish to see her—at once."

"Yes, sir."

During the brief wait, the Intelligence Chief painfully extracted a legal-looking document from a drawer, took up a pen, and began to write. He had just laid the pen down when Brinda arrived.

"Sandy! What on earth are you doing here? Why aren't you in bed?"

Sir John applied a blotter to what he had just written.

"For an excellent reason, my child. I enjoy depriving MacDonald of the chance to dope me with his confounded potions. Then, I had something important to attend to—something I'm afraid you may not like." He handed her the document.

Brinda looked at it uncomprehendingly for a moment or two; then she exclaimed, "Why, it's a passport!"

"Exactly," said Sir John. "Also, your visas—one for Portugal, one for the United States."

"But—," Brinda strove to keep the tremor out of her voice—"I don't understand. Honestly, Sandy. Why?"

Sir John's lean jaws tightened.

"Sit down. Of course, you don't understand. I'll explain."

In short, curt sentences, he told her. It was not his intention to reproach her. But she seemed to have a knack for getting into highly dangerous and delicate situations. First, her fatal mistake of giving a lift to the parachutist spy. Then, Kenley's murder. Finally, the exciting series of events that had begun on the Mountwyn terrace and ended so dramatically at the lonely Nazi espionage headquarters on the moor.

"But you can't be angry at me for that, Sandy!" interrupted Brinda. "After all, we caught the spies."

Colonel Sanderson smiled wearily.

"Killing a spy isn't catching one, Brinda. Besides, that isn't the point. What troubles me is that they might very well have killed you. And, furthermore, the next time, they probably will."

"I see," said Brinda dully. "I thought, perhaps, that I'd helped you this time — that you'd see I could be useful. But it seems I'm just not the Mata Hari type."

It was an unfortunate remark. Sir John's fist clenched.

"Confound it, girl!" he exclaimed. "Don't talk like a fool! And don't speak that name again!" His voice rose. "You hear?"

Brinda stared at him. A slow flush mounted to her cheeks. Never before, in the years since she became his ward, had Sir John spoken to her in such a tone.

She could think of nothing to say, nothing to do. There was a deep sense of hurt in her that lingered even after he had quickly recovered himself, crisply apologized. Vaguely, as in a dream, she listened as he told her what he wished her to do. She was to take such-and-such a ship for Lisbon. There, Aunt Vicky would join her and see her aboard an American ship for New York. By traveling on an American ship, she would be safe from submarines. And, in the States, she should be safe from Nazis, their sinister errand boys, and . . . Ajax.

It was in Brinda's mind to protest that she could not possibly leave England while Britain was at war. But the memory of Sir John's unexpected and unprecedented outburst sealed her lips.

Why his sudden rage at the name of Mata Hari, the famous woman spy? His irate reaction seemed fantastic and irrational. She had the sense of treading on the edge of some fateful mystery, of being threatened by forces that she could not understand.

She barely heard her guardian as he finished: "Sorry that all this is necessary . . . But you'll be better off . . . Too dangerous . . . As I told you repeatedly, I can't have you getting mixed up in espionage . . ."

She was thinking desperately how she could avoid leaving England—and Dick.

At the door, she paused. She wanted to ask Sir John why he had told her she was in danger at the Mountwyns'.

And then Brinda recalled the conversation she had overheard in the house on the moor — the plan by which the stolen list of British agents was to be smuggled to Germany. But hurt pride and bewilderment choked back the words.

"I think you're making a big mistake, Sandy," she managed to say. "I could help, I am sure—"

"You've helped quite enough," responded Sir John dryly.

As the door closed, he again scanned the report that had aroused his anger. Dated the previous day, it gave the location of the spy headquarters on the moor. Through the stupidity of a clerk, it had failed to reach him the previous night. And now it was too late. The secret was out; the plotters dead. Again, he had missed a clue that almost surely would have led him to Ajax—all because of Brinda's curiosity and Dick Malden's impetuous, if effective, action.

He lifted the phone that communicated with the Intelligence Offices.

"Sanderson speaking. Find out when a good neutral boat is leaving for Lisbon. Engage a passage on it for my ward, Miss Brinda Duncan. One way."

With a sigh, he turned back to the mass of papers on his desk.

At the same moment, Brinda was also talking over the housekeeping phone.

"Dick," she said, "I must see you. It's terribly important!"

"Right-o," came Dick's voice reassuringly over the wire. "In a jiffy. . . . And how about a bite and a cocktail?"

"That would be lovely."

"Good! I'll be over for you in no time."

It was so arranged.

In her room, Brinda dressed swiftly, completing her costume with a curiously carved jade necklace—a gift from Sir John when she had graduated from Miss Cartwright's . . . But its color clashed with her costume, and removing it, she turned to a jewel cabinet that was among her few authentic personal possessions.

The cabinet was connected with a forgotten presence — a misty, vague figure from her earliest childhood . . . The mother of whom she knew so little . . . The mother of whom her father, before his death, had spoken so seldom, and whom Sir John, for some reason, never mentioned.

The cabinet, of intricately carved teak, was lined with some other Oriental wood, golden and scented with a strange, exotic perfume. This fragrance emanated especially from a drawer in the bottom, in which Brinda kept her special treasures. She could never quite be sure whether the essence came from the wood or from being impregnated, at some time in the past, by a powerful and arresting feminine perfume. Somehow, she thought it was the latter, because the fragrance was connected in her mind with that dim shadowy memory of the mother she had never consciously known.

It was a secret drawer, and opened by pressing one of the scrolls in the teakwood. She opened it now, and drew forth a necklace of several rows of thin, iridescent pearls.

She tested the pearls against the smoky pallor of her throat, and was satisfied. At the same time, she had a peculiar sense of there being a third person in the room—someone trying to speak to her across a vast, mysterious gulf. An icy chill ran through her; yet she was not frightened. For it was not a new experience. More than once before, on opening the secret drawer, she had felt the same eerie sensation.

Once, at an official dinner, she had been seated next to a famous man—an Englishman who had made a profound study of East Indian mysticism. She had told him, half in fun, of the jewel cabinet, and its curious effect on her. But he had not laughed.

Instead, he had asked: "Tell me, had your mother lived long in the East?"

And to Brinda's affirmative reply, he had said, gravely, "I am not surprised. The dead in the East have their own way of speaking to those they love."

Brinda could hear his voice now, as she linked the clasp of the necklace, and prepared to shut the secret drawer again. It seemed to her, too, she could hear another voice, thin and silvery, trying to tell her something. She felt as though someone were warning her of grave, impending danger . . .

We praise Thee, O God, that Thou art our Shepherd; that like an earthly shepherd Thou dost care for all Thine own, Thou dost seek out the lost and stolen; Thou dost bind up the wounds of the injured and hold them close to Thy bosom. May we know Thee as our Shepherd. May we, like sheep, put our absolute trust and faith in Thee, in Thy leadership, in Thy providence, in Thy power. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

That amazing young man of the screen, Mickey Rooney, came to town last night at the Grand Theatre and literally "went to town" in the most entertaining performance of his career in "Babes on Broadway."

Co-starred with Judy Garland, and aided by a large supporting cast featuring Fay Bainter and such youthful song-and-dance artists as Virginia Weidler, Ray McDonald and Richard Quine, the latter two graduates of the New York musical comedy stage, Rooney and his gang deliver an evening of entertainment worth anybody's time and money.

"Babes on Broadway" is built for entertainment from start to finish. Dealing with the scores of youngsters who yearly invade Broadway to fight for their "break" on the stage, it covers a wide panorama of theatrical life both front and backstage, with its tragedy and humor adroitly balanced by the musical interludes.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"Bedtime Story," co-starring Fredric March and Loretta Young, is now at the Bristol Theatre. Gay and giddy story of a girl who kissed and told (another man to look her up in Reno!), the comedy was directed by Alexander Hall from a screen play by Richard Flournoy.

Robert Benchley, Allyn Joslyn, Eve Arden and Helen Westley head the comedy-wise cast. B. P. Schulberg supervised production for Columbia.

Your Life Insurance in Wartime

IN TIME OF WAR, the security underlying your life insurance takes on a new meaning. More than ever before, security for the family is paramount.

While supporting that security, your life insurance dollars, invested in Government Bonds, are helping to buy planes, tanks, ships, guns, and all the other implements of war. Thus your life insurance dollars are helping to safeguard American lives and liberties.

At the end of 1941, Metropolitan had a total of $1,214,931,424.25 invested in United States Government Bonds . . . about 22% of the Company's assets. In addition, $104,982,562.49 was invested in Canadian Government Bonds.

In both the United States and Canada, life insurance dollars are helping to finance your defense housing, transportation facilities, the production of power, and the industries which are pouring out the steel, chemicals, oil, food, munitions, and other materials needed for the war. Each month more and more of your life insurance dollars are flowing from the channels of peace into investments that serve war uses and war industries.

Because of public appreciation of life insurance, increased efficiency of our agents, and the better national income during 1941, lapses and surrenders were at the lowest rate recorded in the Company's history.

In fulfilling its obligations to policyholders during 1941, Metropolitan paid or credited to policyholders and their beneficiaries more than $567,900,000. Of this amount, more than $383,700,000 was paid or credited to living policyholders.

Metropolitan is a mutual company. Its assets are held for the benefit of its policyholders and their beneficiaries. In the meantime, these assets are, as always in the past, being used to help meet national needs.

MANHATTAN TEAM WINS FIRST GAME OF THE COURT SERIES

Mill Street Boys Make Wonderful Rally, But Cannot Overcome Lead

FINAL SCORE IS 45 TO 40

Soap-Makers Had 16-Point Lead at End of First Half

Penetrating the defense of the Profy team in the second half, the Manhattan Soap A. A. won the first of a five-game series to determine the championship of the Bristol Basketball League. The tilt was played on the Mutual Aid floor last night and the final figures were: Manhattan, 45; Profy's, 40.

The Mill Street aggregation made a gallant rally in the final few minutes of the game and closed an 11-point gap to the final five minutes and at the rate the radiomen were going all they needed to cop the contest was but two extra minutes.

The first half of the tilt was featured by close guarding. Each team respected the scoring prowess of each other. So close was the defensive work and so few the shots that the first quarter score was 6-4 with most of the points coming on long shots.

Still at the close of the first half, the Manhatters had a 16-10 lead, thanks to some fancy shots by Joe Snyder. Snyder scored 10 of the sixteen points and five others went to Ralph Cahall. With the exception of a foul by Mulligan, the remainder of the Manhattan team was blanked.

Every one of the Profy team scored at least one point in the first half but they were missing their shots and no one player accounted for more than three points.

The second half was a complete reversal of the first. The clubs threw defense to the winds and started offensive playing. The teams matched point for point most of the third quarter while in the final quarter, Rip Kelly shot in three double-deckers in fast order to give the soapmen a commanding lead.

Ralph Cahall then found the range of the baskets and it was his shooting which protected the lead for about that time, Vince Profy and Jobby Dugan, of the ultimate losers, began to do some sharp-eyed shooting. In the second half, Profy dropped five double-points into the net while Dugan was good for a sextet of fielders, Cahall also had five twin-pointers.

It was in the final two minutes of play that the Mill Streeters made their best offensive. They were 11 points between when Dugan sunk in a duo of fielders from mid-court. As time was growing short, Vince Profy added a pair to his total but Graham made up for one of these on a "sleeper" shot just before the final gun barked.

Vince Profy and Dugan with 14 and 12 points, respectively, were high men for the losers while the winners' scoring honors went to Cahall with 15 points and Joe Snyder with 14 points.

BALON SCORES 21 POINTS FOR TEAM

Twenty-one points by "Bill" Balon, brilliant forward of the Franklin team, enabled that club to score a 47-43 triumph over the Fifth Ward Sporting Club, in the preliminary game of the Mutual Aid floor. It was the "rubber" game of a three-game series between the teams.

Balon was the whole show as he scored shots from all angles of the court. He accounted for seven field goals and the same number of fouls in eight tries. In fact, the Franklin team showed better marksmanship from the foul line than it did all season as it dropped a total of 15 shots in 18 tries.

Nick Melidio did the best scoring for the losers as he registered six double-deckers and a foul for 13 points.

The Warders staged a 17-point rally in the final period but the early lead of the Franklin team was too much to overcome.

It was announced that the Rohm and Haas team will play in the preliminary game on Thursday night, its opponent being the Manor A. C., leaders of the Morrisville League.

DEVER BOOKED TO FIGHT AT WASHINGTON

Lenny Dever, local lightweight, is scheduled to fight Joey Archibald, former featherweight champion of the world, in a 10-round bout, March 31st, in Washington, D. C.

This is the first time since the days of Harry Boyle that a Bristol boy has had a chance to fight a former champion.

Dever has won 10 straight fights, five of them by knockouts, and he hopes to add Archibald to his list. In his last fight he stopped Quarles, veteran lightweight.

May Name MacArthur Chief of S. W. Pacific Forces

Richard Casey, Australian Minister to the United States, and representatives of the New Zealand government have made repeated requests for immediate American military aid to their nations, now facing Japanese invasion. Observers in the nation's capital believe that if and when further American aid is sent to the southwest Pacific, American officers will be there to lead them, furthering the speculation that the high command shakeup will make MacArthur the man to direct future operations.

Meanwhile some military observers in Washington believe that Japan will wind up the drives in Burma and Java, and then turn their attention to another theatre of war, possibly Soviet Russia's mighty base at Vladivostok.

These sources believe that the heavy losses Japan has sustained in the Dutch East Indies may prevent the Nipponese from fanning out to Australia, New Zealand or India in great force—for the time being at least.

These sources believe that Japan will attempt to consolidate her present and hoped for gains in the southwest Pacific while preparing for a sudden surprise blow against Soviet air and sea bases at Vladivostok, long considered by the Nipponese high command as "a dagger aimed at the heart of Japan."

Lack of official news from American naval and army air forces in Java was interpreted by war experts as an indication that the combined United Nations defenders are hard-pressed by the numerically superior Japanese.

While the situation in Java is not considered hopeless, military men assert that nothing less than a miracle can prevent the eventual fall of the rich Dutch island provided Japan continues to throw its men and ships recklessly into the fray.

Meanwhile at home, high Army officials moved to carry out an executive order for a sweeping reorganization of the War Department designed to streamline the nation's military forces in preparation for the eventual offensive against the Axis powers on all fronts.

Effective March 9th, the reorganization will place a score of War Department bureaus under three simplified units: air, ground and service of supply forces. Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold will be in charge of all air forces, Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair will command ground forces and Major Gen. Bremon B. Somervell will handle the services of supply.

As explained by Secretary of War Stimson, the move, in effect, will "streamline the War Department and gear it for the enormous problems of organizing, training, arming, supplying, transporting and providing strategic control to the rapidly growing Army of the United States in this world conflict."

Significantly, the new set-up is expected to provide a "more intimate relationship" between air and ground fighting. United Nations defeats to date have been due mainly to the enemy's aerial superiority on many fronts.

BIG ALUMNI COURT FRAY TO PRECEDE TITLE CONTEST

Old Grads of Bristol and Fallsington to Vie for Honors

13 "CARDS" ARE INVITED

List Includes Galaxy of Former Schoolboy Basketball Stars

By Jack Gill

An imposing array of former schoolboy basketball stars from Bristol and Fallsington will get an opportunity to re-live some of the scenes of the past Wednesday night in the local gymnasium. Arrangements have been completed to pit the old grads of both institutions against one another in a preliminary skirmish preceding the clash between Fallsington and Bensalem for the Lower Bucks County championship.

Quite a tepid rivalry has existed between the two schools for the past nine years in district court play. There have been seasons during which Fallsington meant but another game to great Bristol fives, and there have also been thrilling upsets tabbed by the Falcons over some outstanding Cardinal court ensembles of the past. Recently, however, Fallsington has been ruling the roost in the series and has won four of the past five games against Bristol.

Some of the best basketball players in town were on Coach Clarence Bartholomew's list Monday evening. Among those to be invited to compete for the Bunnies were Ralph Cahall, leading scorer of the Bristol circuit; Vince and Buck Profy, of the Profy five; Bob Monti, star center on last winter's squad; Gusty Carnvale, hero of Bristol's championship team of a few years ago and several others. Other outstanding players on the list were: Cappecci, Petrick, Sak, Lupkin, Pico, Bill Mignoni, Howell and Fiorito.

Fallsington is headed by three boys who, at one time or another, led the schoolboy loop in individual scoring. They are George Chewning, Shirley Duerr and Fred Briegle. Bud Appenzeller, Bill and George Lovett, Stan Felkner, Warren Baker, LeRoy Reed, Francis Moon and Tom Doyle will also be waiting for a chance to continue Fallsington's mastery over Bristol basketball teams.

Clarence Bartholomew will coach the Bristol team, while Mike DeRisi has charge of Fallsington's forces. The fray will start promptly at 7.30 o'clock.

age in that vicinity to be improved. The councilmen discussed the cleaning of gutters on the east side of Main street, above Pennsylvania avenue, to provide better drainage also.

Burgess Leon Comly told of the need for additional funds for equipment for the two first aid stations to be set up by Hulmeville Emergency First Aid Council. Council voted an additional sum of $50 for supplies. It was reported to the group that the First Aid Council has already purchased at wholesale cost blankets, medicines, lanterns, and also candles, etc. It was the opinion that within a week or ten days the two stations will be in readiness, one at the William Penn Fire Co. station, and another at the Vornhold mill. The Vornhold officials have donated the use of a room at their establishment for the duration of the war. Messrs. Webb and Bilger represent borough council on the Emergency Council. It was stated that two residents have each donated a stretcher; and another resident is making a stretcher. Others in the borough are making closets for storage of supplies, erecting shelves at the stations, etc. The burgess and committee men were high in their praise of interest and activity of the local nurses and emergency workers who are planning the stations.

Bills presented for payment included: Ferd. Reetz, removal of rubbish, $8; insurance, $1.58; Orville Morris, painting signs, $1; postage, $2; Weller & Weller, highway repairs, $100; donation to first aid stations, $50; Phila. Electric Co., current, $62.50.

The bond of tax collector, Horace C. Cox, was presented for council's approval.

An invitation was read from the Bell Telephone Co. for councilmen to attend a "Telephone Night" program at the South Langhorne Casino on March 9th.

standing in front of Stokes Weaver's property, North State street, had two tires removed by thieves.

Thieves entered the Atlantic Service Station, Main and Park streets, Sellersville, a few nights ago and escaped with eight new automobile tires valued at more than $100.

The intruders used a glass cutter to remove a piece of glass from a window and released the lock. Sellersville police say nothing else of value was removed. The tires were in their original wrappings.

Following several deaths at Aquetong road crossing over the Reading Railroad, near New Hope, workmen are installing automatic signals to warn the approach of trains. It is expected the work will be completed within a week.

Although the crossing is on a secondary road, the approach is dangerously located on a steep incline, with views of the track obstructed. School buses for New Hope and Solebury have to cross it, and other residents of the vicinity have to use the crossing to take children to the private school at Lahaska.

Final guarding of the crossing was brought about through petitions circulated by Thomas J. Walker, Republican committeeman for lower Solebury, with the co-operation of school boards and township supervisors.

The Southampton Community Athletic Association enjoyed a supper meeting at Southampton on Monday evening, February 23rd. Robert Hostetter played several accordion solos.

The speaker of the evening was Robert McKinley, of the Inter-State Dairy Council, Philadelphia, who talked on the subject, "Health Notes."

During the business meeting the following officers were elected: President, Ray Heaton; vice-president, William Peters; secretary, Russell Severns; treasurer, Roy Bonawitz; financial secretary, Melvin Severns, and business manager, Claude Lodge.

A committee was appointed to move the backstop from the old field in Davisville to the new school athletic field. Coach Lodge announced that as far as he knows, there would be a town team again this year. It will play in the Twin County League as before. However, there may be two new teams added to this league. The first game will be at Southampton on April 28th, when the all-star team will play Southampton.

that this registration may take place on March 9 and 10.

At the same time, Mr. Boehm announced the tentative dates for the household registrations have been set for March 17, 18, 19 and 20. These will take place in school buildings in which children from a given attendance area attend.

Because New Hope has no elementary school, the registrations will take place in the high school building there.

Rationing registration supervisors have been named in every district of the county, and in order to assist with the sugar rationing registration, registration co-ordinators have been named.

Mr. Boehm has announced the following will serve as registration co-ordinators in the various areas: Area 1, Andrew Jackson, Bristol township; Area 2, William A. Thomas, Langhorne; Area 4, F. Eugene Klinger, Southampton; Area 5, Dr. Ross L. Neagley, Newtown; Area 7, J. Leonard Halderman, Doylestown; Area 8, Lewis N. Snyder, Sellersville; Area 9, Joseph S.
